Are you still involved with investigations of Clean Water Act violations?

If you are, then I wish to deliver to you a document providing facts and discussion of repeated violations of the Clean Water Act within Yakima.

You may recall our initial exchange of emails pertained to the relocation of Shaw Creek into a man-made ditch at the Bainter site of Shaw Creek in Yakima. Given the absence of regulatory oversight, a citizen's lawsuit was filed within Federal District Court so that site restoration will be mandated by the Federal Judge. When Mr. Bainter and Yakima County officials performed the Clean Water Act violations of 2012, they utilized a secretive and unlawful prescription scheme. This prescription scheme involves officials at the WDFW and at Yakima County. These officials have used the prescription scheme repeatedly since 2012 to perform violations of the Federal Clean Water Act. The document that I have created outlines the facts. The only regulatory agency remaining to dismantle the unlawful prescription scheme is the EPA.

However, incremental progress can be made within Federal District Court by systematically filing citizen lawsuits against developers (i.e. Bainter) and against Yakima County. Preferably, the EPA will take meaningful action to dismantle the unlawful prescription scheme that is repeatedly used to violate the Federal Clean Water Act.
